Copyright

Present copyright ownership

The present copyright holders are either each creator (author), or their employer or funder where these assert copyright ownership over the author under the "work for hire principle". For the contribution of each individual author, it is essential to know who the copyright owner in their work is. It cannot be assumed to be the author her/himself.

For articles to be published Open Access (OA) with the Creative Commons by Attribution (CC-BY 4.0) licence, copyright is retained by the present copyright holders.

For articles to be published Subscriber Access, the present copyright holders agree to transfer their copyright to Inter-Research (IR) unless this is not transferable under British Crown or US Government Regulations. The signing author must ascertain the copyright status of each co-author (personal or employer), particularly those employed by the British Crown (includes e.g. Canada) or US Federal departments or agencies, before completing the copyright agreement.

Copyright continued...

Please check or complete the following where relevant:

One (or more) of the authors is an employee of the U.S. Federal Government. (International copyright for these authors will be given as "Outside the USA the U.S. Government").

The work of one or more of the authors is subject to Crown Copyright (affects U.K. and British Commonwealth countries).

The following persons or corporate bodies, not named as authors in the work, also assert copyright ownership (please list)

Copyright agreement

Please complete 1 of the 3 copyright agreements below.

- If the article is to be published OA under the CC-BY 4.0 license, click Option (1).
- If the article is to be published Subscriber Access, click Option (2), or if the article is to be published Subscriber Access and the authors or other original copyright owners apply a Creative Commons by Attribution License (CC BY) to the Author Accepted Manuscript version (see 'Author self-archiving: Green open Access' at <https://www.int-res.com/journals/open-access/>), then click Option (3)
- For other situations, please contact IR Rights and Permissions at permissions@int-res.com before completing the Form.

(1) The present copyright holders hereby license IR to publish and distribute the article under the Creative Commons by Attribution (CC-BY 4.0) license. Please complete the "responsible for payment" details in the box at the foot of the page.

(2) The present copyright holders hereby transfer the copyright in this article to IR except where this is prohibited by legal Statute (e.g. British Crown, US Federal employees). The transfer comprises the exclusive right of IR to reproduce and distribute the article world-wide in any media. All other rights other than the copyright remain with the present copyright holders.

IR asserts the copyright transferred to it jointly with the non-transferring copyright holders, except where the latter comprises ALL the present copyright holders. The non-transferring copyright holders grant IR a royalty-free license to publish and distribute the article world-wide in all media.

(3) The author(s) or other original copyright owner(s) has/have applied a Creative Commons by Attribution (CC BY) license to the Author Accepted Manuscript (AAM) version of the article prior to the signing of this copyright agreement. Inter-Research is hereby licensed to publish the Version of Record under Subscriber Access with the copyright in the VoR transferred to inter-Research as described in option (2).
